Sharp Emergency Room:

A ER visit takes places in Sharp hospital where the collective effect of negligence in the US over several hospitals and in several states (Massachusetts, New York, Ohio, and Washington, and then California) becomes apparent. Due to negligence I went partially blind in a hospital setting from optic neuropathy (constrained visual fields and lack of base eyesight).

The doctors in the hospital refuse to give the palliative therapy for the condition in an emergency situation. They mention that it is a medical emergency with "intermittent vision loss" in the setting of Multiple Sclerosis without any verbose description:

Patient Education Materials

JANA , NARENDRA has been given the following patient education materials:

Multiple Sclerosis

Multiple sclerosis (MS) is a disease of the central nervous system. It leads to the loss of the insulating covering of the nerves (myelin sheath) of your brain. When this happens, brain signals do not get sent properly or may not get sent at all. The age of onset of MS varies.

CAUSES

The cause of MS is unknown. However, it is more common in the northern United States than in the southern United States.

RISK FACTORS

There is a higher number of women with MS than men. MS is not an illness that is passed down to you from your family members (inherited). However, your risk of MS is higher if you have a relative with MS.

SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS

The symptoms of MS occur in episodes or attacks. These attacks may last weeks to months. There may be long periods of almost no symptoms between attacks. The symptoms of MS vary. This is because of the many different ways it affects the central nervous system. The main symptoms of MS include:

- Vision problems and eye pain.
- Numbness.
- Weakness.
- Inability to move your arms, hands, feet, or legs (paralysis).

This is a clear effect of negligence, further a disease progression to the point optic neuropathy. Its serves as an example of the US trying to cause intentional physical harm and then ignoring it. Though the ER report isn't explicit the audio tapes during the ER appointment describe the full situation and are explicit to show the severity of the situation.
