April 2nd 2023 is Police assault in Tokyo Japan where the Police instead of taking me to the hospital for being clearly physically ill with multiple sclerosis and optic neuropathy, took me to the police station and assaulted me there. I first tried to take a taxi cab to the hospital near by but I was unable to see my cellphone screen due to optic neuropathy. Then I was found unconscious on the side of the street (this is before I became unconscious and unable to see with optic neuropathy when I was taking my things to my new apartment). One of my possessions was missing as well.

These pictures are before I became fully unconscious on the side of the street.

The police in Tokyo Japan practiced refugee persecution by not taking me to the hospital with clear proof that I was physically ill with multiple sclerosis. I couldn't even see the police officers or stand up without falling down rapidly, dyskinesia in neurology terms.
